Performance review

- The S&P/ASX 100 Accumulation Index increased in value in July, adding 6.12%. All market sectors were positive with Consumer Staples and Consumer Discretionary the top performers.
- The Ralton Leaders portfolio gained 5.52% for the month, underperforming the benchmark by 0.60%.
- For the month, being overweight Consumer Discretionary and Consumer Staples added value to returns, however our underweight to Materials, and stock selection within this sector, both weighed on relative performance.

Aristocrat Leisure (ALL, +15.5%) – again added material value to the portfolio as share price momentum continued into July. This followed the company's profit upgrade in June and a strong presence in the Goldman Sachs Annual Slot survey during July. As we highlighted last quarter, the profit upgrade was driven by a number of factors including market share gains in Australia and North America, continued growth in participation gaming machine installations (annuity-style income) and further stellar growth in the Digital division. This growth reflects the continued investment in product by ALL. Looking forward, we believe ALL's operating momentum should continue while its main peers remain distracted by their own large-scale acquisitions. With a strong balance sheet and free cash flow, ALL has the option of increasing distributions or making another acquisition. We are comfortable with ALL pursuing acquisitions given its success integrating VGT and Product Madness.

AMP Limited (AMP, +12.6%) – shares in AMP benefited from a rising equity market and reversed much of the underperformance from last quarter. Our investment thesis for AMP is focused on the stabilisation of the Wealth Protection business (including a potential reinsurance deal to release capital from this business) and its successful management of its cost base to support its margin in Australian Financial Services as the transition from legacy to MySuper products takes place. Also, AMP is seeing strong growth in AMP Capital as it continues to benefit from FUM flows from its international operations, in particular the Chinese joint venture.

Woolworths Limited (WOW, +12.1%) – our investment in corporate turnaround WOW added value to the portfolio in July following a well-received market update. From our perspective, the key message from the update was an improvement in sales momentum in volume terms in June and July. This comes after an investment of approximately $1bn in reducing prices and improving customer service. The group also has new concept stores in operation where they are trialing new formats. We will be looking for continued improvement in key sales metrics and expect to hear more on store refurbishment plans over the next six months. The success of these new store formats in driving higher sales and the pace of the roll-out of the refurbishments will be critical to sales improvement. Several substantial write-offs were announced as part of CEO Banducci's strategic review, including a provision to cover the closure of a number of unprofitable stores across the supermarkets and Big W networks. There are numerous other moving parts in this major turnaround and it is still relatively early days, so we will continue to carefully monitor the changes coming through. This turnaround story will likely take another four to five years to play out.

Computershare Limited (CPU)	Overweight
Incitec Pivot (IPL)	Overweight
Origin Energy Ltd (ORG)	Overweight

Computershare Limited (CPU, -3.2%) – the success of the 'leave' vote in the UK Brexit referendum saw heavy selling in financial stocks extend from June into July. For CPU, there are two key impacts: (1) CPU's UK operations will see a translation headwind given the decline in the pound, and (2) interest rates globally have eased again during July as expectations rose of a substantial monetary easing by the Bank of England and the ECB. CPU is exposed to declines in interest rates as it earns part of its income from the earnings on its substantial cash balance.

Incitec Pivot (IPL, -3.4%) — IPL underperformed in a strong market driven by the rising US dollar and continued weakness in fertilizer prices which flow from rising grain inventories across the globe. On a more positive note, we expect IPL's Louisiana ammonia manufacturing plant will commence operations this quarter. This will be a key event for IPL given capital expenditure will decline and cash flow will rise, which should drive a material inflection point in IPL's return profile. With DAP and Urea prices nearing 10-year lows, we expect IPL to make reasonable returns from the fertilizer business given its position on the cost curve.

Origin Energy (ORG, -4.4%) - ORG retraced some of its recent share price gains during July after the oil price weakened again (down 14% for July). ORG's share price will continue to move with the oil price to a degree, however we believe ORG has made good progress on several fronts. Since the capital raise in September 2015, ORG has shown solid performance from its Energy Markets business, ramped up production at its APLNG plant in Queensland, taken material costs out of the business (particularly the upstream gas assets) and finally, made progress on non-core asset sales as part of an overall debt-reduction strategy. The planned 120day 'completion test' for the first LNG train is currently underway and once complete, will see debt commitments from the parent ORG group against the APLNG JV reduce materially. We are expecting to see further improvement on each of these fronts at the full-year profit results in August.

Portfolio changes

Key additions and material adjustments

Bought
AGL Ltd (AGL)
Santos (STO)

AGL Ltd (AGL) — we added a position in utility company AGL during July. An investment in AGL has three supportive features from our vantage. Firstly, under CEO Vessey AGL has made considerable progress in driving productivity improvements to boost profits. Secondly, the increased use of renewable energy in the electricity markets is driving up the wholesale electricity price to the benefit of low-cost electricity producers such as AGL. Finally, AGL's balance sheet is in good shape after recent asset sales. AGL is well positioned to either return capital to shareholders or alternatively pursue acquisitions. There has been media speculation that AGL is a potential bidder for the assets (both generation assets and the retail business) of WA-based Alinta Energy.

In the energy space we have added a modest position in Santos (STO). STO recently appointed Kevin Gallagher as CEO, who we had followed during his tenure at Clough (an engineering contractor) where he successfully turned around a series of underperforming businesses. He faces a similar task in his new role where the cost structure and culture are impediments to the successful operation of key assets. It appears good progress has been made around parts of the cost structure, with a major business simplification undertaken and more to come. One of his key insights has been that the business was run by too many lawyers! STO has some great assets with the best being the 13% stake in the PNG LNG operation – a world class project with expansion opportunities, operated by Exxon. The Cooper Basin gas fields and GLNG (30% owned by STO) are both good assets, but require further focus on cost reductions to achieve cost-effective delivery and well operation. This should be achievable given what has been achieved elsewhere in the world.

Key disposals and material adjustments

Sold
Aurizon Holdings (AZJ)
Graincorp (GNC)
Woodside Petroleum (WPL)
Henderson Group (HGG)
Bank of Queensland (BOQ)

In total, we exited five stocks during July. These moves reflect a mix of stocks reaching our valuation, a planned reduction in our financial sector exposures and finally, with Woodside Petroleum (WPL), our preference for STO in the energy sector.

Aurizon Holdings (AZJ) – we elected to take profits in AZJ as the stock reached our assessed fair value. We still like the fundamentals of the business as despite the difficulty facing global coal markets, we believe AZJ is well placed to deliver reasonably steady profits and continue to pay a healthy dividend. AZJ's growth projects are however somewhat capped and this has been reflected in recent write-downs for various expansion projects that were being worked on, but now appear unlikely to proceed. AZJ is speculated to be looking to acquire Glencore's rail assets in the Hunter Valley. Given AZJ already has a presence in the Hunter, such a move is logical, although subject to the price and the AZJ board's appetite for risk, may involve a capital raising. We would re-visit the position in the event of a pull-back in the share price.

Graincorp (GNC) – having already reduced our holding in GNC, we exited the position entirely during July. GNC has re-rated since our acquisition, reflecting a more positive view from the market on the benefits of growth projects in the Oils and Malt divisions. Reasonable recent rains have also improved the outlook for grain harvest and wheat exports. This was largely in tune with our thesis and is now reflected in the higher share price, driving our decision to exit. Going forward, the key piece of uncertainty is the market share that GNC retains in the key east coast export markets in Australia. Should GNC retain or even gain market share in the highly competitive market for export grains, then GNC shares could well justify a higher valuation. However, with no real confidence on this score, we elected to take profits and sell.

We sold our position in Woodside Petroleum (WPL). This was principally due to our view that the investment opportunity in STO (already discussed) was a preferable exposure in the energy sector, assuming oil prices stabilise and trend higher over the coming years. WPL management has vigorously and prudently pursued growth initiatives and we note its progress in regard to Wheatstone LNG, NW Shelf back fill and the recent African Oil project acquisition in Senegal. However, in the absence of a meaningful WPL stake in a major growth project such as Browse or Sunrise, the company's growth outlook looks challenging.

Henderson Group (HGG) and Bank of Queensland (BOQ) – finally, we reduced the portfolio's financial sector exposure through the sale of two of the portfolio's smaller holdings, BOQ and HGG.
